THE FRIENDS OF THE UNION MARSHAL THEIR FORCES.

A Brilliant Gathering in Front of the Union League on Saturday Night.

Speeches of Kelley, Bond, Matthews, O'Neill, Etc. Etc.

The monster mass meeting of the loyal citizens in front of the Union League House last Saturday night was one that will long be remembered for its brilliant surroundings and for the thrilling eloquence that, coming from the mouths of the illustrious speakers, swayed the vast multitude by one purpose, that of loyalty to the great party that has been fighting for freedom and equal rights.

The League House itself was most splendidly illuminated by the electric light, and the general air was one of intense enthusiasm. The meeting was opened, and John Price Wetherill, Esq., called the meeting to order, and moved that Colonel John W. Forney be selected as the chairman of the evening.

You are cheering the wrong man; but for the time being, I am Colonel John W. Forney. I am here to return thanks to you for the cordial manner in which you have received his name as chairman of this meeting. It is a matter of profound grief to me that within a few hours he has been humiliated and disgraced.

It will now be my pleasant duty to introduce to you a fearless southern Republican. (A voice—"Is he loyal?") Is he loyal, Ay, and he is!

My fellow-citizens of the United States: It has not been with any intention of making a speech that I have come here to-night, but rather to repeat to you what I have said in the past.

When in 1848 the national differences were being fought out upon the issue of the Potomac, at a time when the armies of the United States were almost disbanded, and when you were running a man named Woodford for Governor of this State, at a time that with interest and anxiety did we watch your canvass, and how our hearts thrilled with joy when we saw that the war should be decided in favor of the Union.

My fellow-citizens, when our fathers fought out the Revolutionary war, and came to form a national government, the representatives from that side of Mason and Dixon's line were not equal to the side of the dominant institution of that section.

The speaker further stated that in the war of the Revolution he had given his services in the army. In 1861 they were again called upon, and again they looked to our standard, and now they are called upon to fight for the Union.

Referring to the threatened intervention of the militia of Maryland in the district that has been formed, which was, that since the rebellion, the militia of the United States has been called upon to fight for the Union.

I have recently traveled through eight of the States of the Union, getting back yesterday. Everywhere I went, the question came to me, What is Pennsylvania going to do with the Union?

More than one-half of the cost of the war and the losses on the part of the Union were covered by the contributions of the loyal people of this State.

asked about Johnson, the traitor, and whether we were going to tolerate him. (Great applause, and cheers for Kelley.)

The speaker entered into an able and exhaustive argument of the reconstruction policy of the government. He remarked that of all the questions which have arisen since the war, the most important is whether the Union should be restored to its former condition, or whether it should be reorganized on a new basis.

The following gentlemen acted as officers of the meeting: Vice President, James C. Hand, Edwin H. Filler, William Sellers, Fred. Frazer, John E. Lewis, Adolph E. Horie, Samuel J. Stokes, Jay Cooke, Thomas Webster, Thomas Tasker, Wm. H. Reddeman, Wm. H. Gibson, George W. Hubbell, Dr. Elias W. Bond, Jos. B. Lyndall, Col. Wm. B. Thomas, Wm. B. Bennett, Henry A. Sheppard, John H. Brown, Jos. Irwin, Thos. Stinson, Chas. W. Brown, James McDougall, Col. Thos. Crawford, Capt. Thos. Briarhurst, Ben. H. Brown, David Oliver, J. Vaughn Merrick, Sec. R. S. Kenderdine.

Crawford, Capt. Thos. Briarhurst, Ben. H. Brown, David Oliver, J. Vaughn Merrick, Sec. R. S. Kenderdine.

Col. R. Stockert Matthews, of Baltimore, was the first speaker. He said America was a free home and strong nation, and one which provided the beneficence of freedom, which was the greatest blessing that God has ever bestowed upon the human race.

He referred to the fact that every vote cast for the Democratic party in the late election was a vote for the restoration of the Union to its former condition, and that the Democratic party had no other policy.

During six years past the loyal men of the south have looked to Pennsylvania about the time the leaves fall, and they found the State, and party full of secessionists, and would to heaven it would have been away, as did the leaves!

The speaker concluded by enjoining upon Pennsylvanians to recollect that they would not vote for men to hold office, but for the maintenance of the Union, and that they would not vote for men who would create a government for the South against the Union, and that they would not vote for men who would restore the Union to its former condition, and that they would not vote for men who would restore the Union to its former condition.

THE THIRD SENATORIAL DISTRICT.—Among the interesting features of the recent political campaign in Philadelphia, the Noble-Donovan struggle in the Third Senatorial District is not the least worthy of notice.

The speaker concluded by enjoining upon Pennsylvanians to recollect that they would not vote for men to hold office, but for the maintenance of the Union, and that they would not vote for men who would create a government for the South against the Union, and that they would not vote for men who would restore the Union to its former condition, and that they would not vote for men who would restore the Union to its former condition.
